UM ROTC CADETS GET FULL-RIDE SCHOLARSHIPS

The equivalent of full-ride scholarships have been awarded to seven University of Montana sophomore men by the United States Army. The recipients are all members of the UM Reserve Officer Training Corps at Missoula.

Lt. Col. Keith Angwin, UM professor of military science, reported the scholarships have been awarded to Clyde Langaunet, business administration major from Missoula; Scott Wheeler, history major from Spokane; David Thomas, political science major from Chinook; Douglas Heyer, elementary education major from Indianapolis; Michael Maxson, political science major from Richfield, Minn.; Richard Harden, history and political science from Omaha; Paul Dallmann, history major from McLean, Va.

The scholarships pay for the cadets' University tuition, all textbooks, laboratory fees and $50 cash each month of the academic year.

The recipients were selected on the basis of academic excellence, extracurricular activities, physical standards and an evaluation of their leadership motivation and potential. In order to retain the scholarship, each cadet must maintain standards of academic achievement and personal conduct, as well as ranking in the upper third of his ROTC class and continuing to demonstrate leadership potential.
